Our book club read "The Kingdom of Ordinary Time". It was a discovery for me. Her poetry is made of ordinary life events...big things like the death of your mother and a brother and little things like walking down the street and seeing your reflection in a store window. This is what brought it home to me personally...it was so like life.

5.0 out of 5 stars The Kingdom of Ordinary Time. Reviewed in Canada on July 9, 2012. Verified Purchase. This is a beautiful book of poetry. Each poem was exquisitely crafted and layered with deep meaning. The Mary poems within this book were my favorite. All of the poems in this book are poems that I will return to time after time and never tire of.

The Kingdom of Ordinary Time is a many-sided enterprise, and the insistence on fighting its own stylistic passion for integration (in form, in spirit) is its pathos. "Limbo" reintroduces the quality of "ordinary time," beginning "We saw something once. And then it was over. / And time started up again as if it had never stopped."

By Erin Liskiewicz Marie Howe's latest book, The Kingdom of Ordinary Time, merges the metaphysical onto everyday life and examines the presence of the sacred in "ordinary time," where "One loaf = one loaf. One fish = one fish." By doing this, Howe reshapes the way we look at the biblical ideas that are common to many of us.

Marie Howe, The Kingdom of Ordinary Time . Ordinary Time. We've entered that time in the Christian calendar called "Ordinary Time." In Latin, the name for this season, the longest one in the Church calendar, is tempus per annum (literally, time during the year). On the one hand, I'm deeply grateful for the acknowledgement that not all of life is about transformation and activity, fasts and feasts, repentance and celebration.

The Kingdom Of Heaven/God (Sixteenth Sunday In Ordinary Time) The sermon focus on the Kingdom of Heaven/God. Further, it reflects that we may sow the seed of love to accommodate the poor, the migrant, and we may mix the yeast of love to reach out to insignificant and needy people, building the Kingdom of Heaven/God wherever we are and whatever we do.
