But it turns out some Barn Owls have an additional secret weapon in their hunting arsenal—moonlight. Scientists have long puzzled over why adult Barn Owls (which are strictly nocturnal, so they hunt in the dark) can show a spectrum of color variations on their body feathers: Some individuals are a pure eggshell white, while others are streaked with pale rusty hues, and still others are a rich reddish brown. These color variations aren't due to the age or sex of the owl.
